A rose once bloomed in a garden,
White and dainty and fair,
By the garden wall at evenfall
It dreamed and nodded there;
And a raspberry bush climbed over the wall,
And hung in a rakish pose;
"Haven't we met somewhere, my pet?"
The raspberry said to the rose.

Tuberculosis Eradication.

"The history of bovine tuberculosis eradication in this, or any other state where tuberculosis is a menace to the cattle industry is very interesting," declared H. M. Tucker, Chief, Division of Animal Industry, Maine Department of Agriculture, at the meeting of the Maine Livestock Breeders' Association. "Such history is marked by exaggerated claims on both wallace H. White receives the nominasides; excited utterances in the press and on the platform for and against, together with spasmodic and erratic legis-lation. One cannot look back over the In Oxford County there was but one servative policy in dealing with this dis-ease. Errors have been made, but in Hebron, Buckfield, Sumner, Hartford, most instances they were unavoidable because of the lack of knowledge. Dishonesty crept in and for a time the practice of 'plugging' the cattle threatened to demoralize the work. But other methods of testing have now been perfected so that this old, dishonest practice is practically a thing of the past With the three recognized methods o conducting the tuberculin test; namely the subcutaneous, intradermal and opthalmic, have come greater accuracy in diagnosing the disease, and with ience in the test, so that the skeptic and the open opponent is seldom found to day.

"In the work of eradicating bovine tuberculosis the one thing that has counted and will always count is persistent work. A large appropriation for a year or two, no matter how wisely expended, is practically thrown away if at the end of that time the work is allowed to lapse for a term of years. This may be likened to a victorious army that leaves no rear guard to defend the ground taken and the enemy closes in ochind as strong as ever. In efficiency along this line Maine can justly be proud of her record. No excessive expenditure of state funds has been received or even asked for in carrying on this work. But it has gone forward steadily from year to year for a long time and to-day every one can point with pride to the fact that

Selecting Hens. . (By O. M. Wilbur.)

To make the most from hens one must that careful and rigid selection must be practiced from the time the chicks hatch until the last old hen goes to market. Only those old hens should be used as breeders which have shown themselves to be good producers during their-pullet ear, and when pullets are to be used as which have shown themselves to be high producers during the first two or three months of their laying period.

In selecting any poultry the most important quality to look for is vitality because without vitality hens cannot produce strong chicks. Weak chicks will well matured, they will never lay a large number of eggs. Vitality is indicated by a short broad head with prominent bulging ever and a cabellar public as well as wel not grow and develop into strong pullets bulging eyes and a short stout back. The body too should be long, broad and deep showing capacity.

When selecting pullets about the bes ime to go through the flock is from the of the members. time they are beginning to lay until the flock is laying 20 per cent. All deformed or sick pullets should be removed. Undersized, slow maturing pullets or any that show a lack of vitality and small body capacity should never be kept as layers. Save only those as layers that are early maturing, of good size for the breed and which have indications of strong vitality and a large body capacity. egg production drops off during the summer, then selection or calling should be great spaces of the earth into stand practiced. > Many Greater Boston and other New England world war veterans, who attended the third and fourth officers' training camps in this country and overseas as enlisted men, will receive additional pay for the time spent in training, following a ruling made by the comptroller-general in Washington. The back pay will amount to as much as $250. According to the comptroller's ruling. enlisted men attending these schools were entitled to the difference between the pay drawn by them and $100 a month which was the pay of those attending the first two Plattsburg camps. At the opening of the third series of camps a war department order ruled out the $100 allowance, but this was contrary to law, the comptroller-general rules.

Plan a nutritious and easily digested diet, which shall include enough variety to stimulate appewas lately corroborated by Pawlow's discovery of "Appetit-jus." That "monotonous diet makes monotonous minds" is preached to-day by our foremost dieti tians. To put thought and money into right diet is one of the best ways to use

Put money into fresh air. Strange as it may seem, it is easier to secure good air for our rooms, than good diet for our bodies. This, first, because diet has to be adapted more or less to each individ ual; and second, because there are or the market many devices which are o mmense help in automatically regulat is not right for any one to live or work f doors, the air is found to be percepti oly different in aweetness.

The cost of investing in exercise may be merely an outlay of time. Walking in the open air, systematically, for nothing but the time you spend at it It may even mean a saving of carfare. But do not let walking be your sole ex-ercise in the fresh air. G rlening is more delightful and joy-bringing, if you have the taste and the opportunity for it. Evening, 15c and 35c. Neither may you ignore the outdoo game, where together with fresh air exercise, and stimulus to respiration and circulation, you have over and above all these the joys of social intercourse, th rejuvenation of real play. To keep the play spirit alive, to unbend and limber up, will make you 50 per cent more valuable in your work.

All these are general directions as investment of time and capital. Let us come to the specific one for this seasoninvestment in a summer vacation. It is a good sign to see vacation clubs for savings opened at the banks, it means vacation insurance for the wage-earner. It is bad to find some business houses giving the "split vacation," of a week at a time, thus making impossible the continued relaxation of even the pairry fortnight in the long year of work. Worst of all is it to find men and women in business saying they are not able to take from your customary environment, and to see what new scenes will bring out of you that you did not know was in you. It pays to drop from your mind all thought of your work, to fill it with something else, and become a new per-

Let your vacation this year be the best you ever had. Let it be unique. Plan to live out of doors, to fare de liciously, to be carefree and at ease, to be idle and without responsibility, to do things you never did before in the way of feats of hiking, swimming, mountainclimbing, playing at games, being your natural self while surrounded by nature. So may you invest in life insurance, health insurance, increased earnings in surance, and joy insurance for the year

A Bungalow Announcement Party.

(By Viva Clark.)

Everybody attended Betty Lee's parties. They were simple, and yet then were original, and there were always good things to eat. So when invitations arrived for a bungalow party, written or brown cards in red ink, with little red bungalows painted in the corners, her friends rejoiced. And went en masse friends rejoiced. And went en masse. As soon as the guests were all present Betty passed about tiny sample paint cards, which the men matched up for partners, then she seated each couple a partners, then she seated each comple as a card table equipped with drawing paper, rulers, pencils, and erasers.

"You are to draw a plan for a bungatiow," she announced. "Make it jue exactly the way you want it when you exactly do build rooms, with all the little.

"Stove there! That's too far from the window—how do you think I can see whether my ples are burning in the oven if it's that dark?" Or, "Now, that will make a fine sev ing-room—cutting table there—"

"Here, you can't have that for a sewing-room; I want a den."
So interested were they that when Betty called, "Time's up!" there was a Betty called, "Time's up!" there was a perfect chorus of requests for "more time; we've only just begun!"

While she collected plans, the guests drew lots for judges, who after greadeliberation and laughter awarded to the winning couple a jewel case for the girl in the form of a quaint Duch china house in brown, with a removable remoof; for the man, a little metal bungalow paper-weight.

Then Betty ushered her guests to the dining room, where the first glimpse of the table brought a little chorus: "Bet-the table brought a little chorus: "Bettyl How lovely!"

Red-shaded brown candles cast a rud dy glow over a table with brown lines doilies, red houses appliqued in the corners, and napkins of fringed red crepe. In the center, on a bed of green, stood a brown pasteboard bungalow, redroofed, with red chimneys and wide plazzas, which were heaped with brown-wrapped bundles connected by red rib bons to place cards, cut in the shape of tiny brown houses, and bearing namerand saucy verses in red ink.

Gay, red tomatoes stuffed with chicken Gay, red tomatoes stuffed with chicken and celery saiad reposed on lettuce on individual plates; at each place stood a slender glass of raspberry shrub, with nut bread sandwiches, filled with currant jelly and cottage cheese. Chocolate ice cream, topped off with maraschino cherries and demi-tasse, with nuts and little red candies, completed the simple menu.

Later each guest pulled his-favor from the piazza of the bungalow, opened it and read aloud the verse upon his place card. There was for the girl who liked clothes, but hated to sew, a tiny sewing nachine with the verse:

"We hope this sewing machine bewitches."
